Imlek Through the Eyes of the Youth

Imlek (Chinese New Year)

For many younger Chinese-Indonesians, Imlek is still a cherished time to connect with family and celebrate cultural traditions—but the way it's experienced is evolving. While reunion dinners and giving angpao remain central, modern technology and lifestyle changes have added new layers to the celebration. Today, some families send angpao digitally through mobile apps, and instead of traditional clothing, youth might opt for more casual or trendy red outfits to show spirit while staying stylish.

Some younger people say they feel more connected to the festive atmosphere than to the deeper meanings behind the customs. However, many still appreciate the values of togetherness and respect that Imlek represents. Social media also plays a big role—sharing photos of food, decorations, or family moments has become part of the celebration itself. Even bai nian (visiting relatives) can be virtual when families are far apart. For today's youth, Imlek is no longer just about repeating old traditions, but about finding ways to honor them in a modern, meaningful way.

Indulge in an exquisite Chinese New Year buffet featuring traditional delicacies and modern twists, meticulously crafted to tantalize your taste buds.
